These are dedicated to remembering the loss of life and the damage to the city caused by the atomic bombing of Hiroshima on 6 August 1945. A fourth memorial, commonly known as the Sacred Crane, is dedicated to those who died after the bombing. It stands at the southern exit of the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park and features a 2.5-ton sculpture of a large black crane. Atomic Bomb Dome The Atomic Bomb Dome was originally an ordinary circular building of green tiles. Its dome was built in the shape of an hourglass, which symbolized the fact that the city was created in the middle of the sea. The dome was the headquarters of the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, an organization that investigated the effects of the war on Japan and the atomic bomb's aftermath. After the war, the dome was temporarily used as a military barrack. Later it was converted into the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Museum (Atomic Bomb Dome Museum). Peace Memorial The Peace Memorial is a circular building in the shape of a "dumpling" (a food dumpling is seen in the United States as a symbol of Hiroshima). It is built on a foundation in the shape of the H shape of the letter "H", symbolizing the letter's shape and the atomic symbol. It was built by
