September 28, 2015 Admin. Hi I am trying to create a user account control in the framework for my project, but it doesn't seem to work. I have created a sharepoint site with 3 subsites. I added Sharepoint Lists, and in the new subsite i created an SPList and a Document library to show all the different forms, but it doesn't show up in the User Control Toolbox. I added a usercontrol to the subsite, but it doesn't show up in the Content editor, or in the template gallery. it's not showing up in the Toolbox but works fine, i just checked it. SharePoint Designer is showing it in the Toolbox but i can't make it to the site templates, it's not even listed, just like most other usercontrols. It's not even listed in the content editor or the template gallery. I looked at the properties and nothing looks wrong. The first step is to add your controls to the site and subsites via the Site Collection Settings -> Site Settings -> User Controls. You'll also need to add the controls to any site templates you've created and published. The second step is to register your controls (in the code/design) by calling this.RegisterUserControl(type) and passing the "System.Web.UI.UserControl" type name. The controls will then show up in the Toolbox as a result of the RegisterUserControl call. I would recommend checking out the RegisterUserControl sample in the Microsoft.Office.Server.UserControls.Default.Controls.UC namespace which shows how to register a control in a SP2010 site and then show it up in the Toolbox.
