Contents show] History Edit The drawing model of AutoCAD was developed by a research team at Stanford University, and was publicly released in June 1980, together with a list of future features.[1] Although the software was licensed by the university for private use, it was available to the general public, free of charge, for commercial use for three months.[2] The software was developed by Paul Kowaleski in January 1980 and was named AutoDraw, because it was intended to automate drafting tasks. The official name was AutoCAD, a contraction of Autocadographic.[3] The first customers for AutoDraw were Stanford researchers, and Kowaleski was granted a license to sell his software for 10 days.[4] A research team from Carnegie Mellon University and Stanford University designed and developed AutoCAD for the Macintosh. The first beta version was released in February 1982. The first commercial version, AutoCAD Extended, was released for the Macintosh in June 1983. Later versions, including the 1990 release of AutoCAD 97, had a bitmapped graphical user interface. On January 31, 1987, Autodesk acquired the AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT software and related assets from the Carnegie Mellon and Stanford university licensing agreements. On August 10, 1989, Autodesk acquired the UVVision, UVision and UPD developments from McDonnell Douglas (of McDonnell Douglas Aviation Systems). These development assets related to the creation of AutoCAD 3D. On July 31, 1991, Autodesk acquired the Unigraphics product line. Unigraphics was the development name for one of the world's first graphic computer-aided design (CAD) systems. On January 21, 1994, Autodesk Inc. announced the purchase of the Elan Corporation for US$230 million.[5] On April 17, 2000, Autodesk acquired the ArcAdj and IncAdj product lines from Engineering System Design (ESD). On May 24, 2000, Autodesk announced a deal with the Japanese company IHI for a joint venture, TPL Software, to develop and sell software products. On November 30, 2001, Autodesk announced the purchase of the Spanish company Arotek Software for $210 million. On January 7, 2004, Autodesk announced that its Electronic Tools business unit would be spun off into an independent company, Autodesk Inc., as part of

DWG and DXF AutoCAD can read a number of different file formats. It can read DXF, DWG, and ASCII drawings, and it can write DXF, DWG, and ASCII. The conversion between the various formats is automated. This saves the user from the need to perform them manually. The version used is included in the application and the name of the version is displayed in the top right corner. If necessary, AutoCAD can read and write the native format of a particular file system, such as AutoCAD for Solaris, AutoCAD for Windows, AutoCAD for Java, AutoCAD for Apple, or AutoCAD for ASP.NET. In addition, AutoCAD can import or export a drawing from the main document, including the keyword, filter, views, drawing manager, dimension styles, dynamic information, cross-reference symbols, copy objects, annotation, stamps, comments, CAD TsLib language class library (CADTLB), and shared content in both ASCII or binary format. Communication The application provides inter-process communication (IPC) with a library called "TsLib". It also provides protocol buffers and WebSockets. The Scots lost to England and Wales at Twickenham in October but had won the first three matches of this season. They host France, who have won both their previous meetings with the Scots, at Murrayfield on Saturday. "Greig's been in and out with a few injuries," Solomons told BBC Scotland. "But he's now trained fully for a couple of days. I wouldn't say he's 100% yet, but he's got a good chance of being fit enough to play." Laidlaw joined Edinburgh from Glasgow Warriors in August 2011. His appearance on the European Championship roster for the hosts Ireland in 2013 was his last game for Scotland. Solomons added: "I'd say he's looking good. It's still up in the air, ca3bf1094

One of the most requested features on GameFront is the ability to share a Trophy, let alone a game. And so, this month, we're bringing you a bunch of new features that we hope make the Trophy experience just a little bit better! Let's start with the main game here. Every player will now be able to share their Trophies, so everyone wins! And when you do, you can make friends with other players and share your Trophies together. Trophy sharing (that is, letting friends play your game) is currently limited to our
