As the Trump campaign debates the battle for the Republican presidential nomination, perhaps the most intriguing the most important person to understand is not the mogul himself," wrote. "Since the day he announced his candidacy poll it is not that he wants to win but is that he wants to spread isn't true," King wrote, saying Trump. "That's the negative side of him," he wrote. "He wants to be his own miracle be himself." The Republican frontrunner "has a fascist vein running through him," he wrote. "That's a scary thing. We've never had a proffered candidate for the presidency to be a foreigner. It is a dangerous thing that happens around the world. We don't want it here," King said, noting Trump's business relationships with a Chinese investor and with a Russian oligarch. King said that Trump's "smooth talking" and "reaching out" characteristics "mask[s] his real intentions which are far more severe." In their conversation, he wrote, "he was looking for reassurances from me that there wouldn't be a war." But those reassurances weren't forthcoming, he wrote. King noted that Trump is "a man who loves war and will talk it up if you give him the chance." Trump has been "adamant about America going to war" in Syria, King wrote, citing news reports. King said that what he's discovered about Trump is not what he'd expected. He's realized that the billionaire is "abrupt, brash, and uninformed." In contrast to the campaign surrogates, who are "enjoying making speeches," the businessman's hours of public speaking have transformed him "from a conventional politician into a dangerous demagogue," he wrote. At his speeches, he "comes off as convincing," King said. He's oblivious to the "real issues" and "the foundations brochure of American values that the right has been touting," he wrote. "He is a ranting, raving, childish, narcissistic demagogue that has no respect for the mainstream media and he thinks he knows more about policy than a lot of insiders who have served two or three terms in Congress," King wrote. If elected, "he will be a disaster for America, but the nation cannot afford to send him as the top diplomat," he wrote. 22/11/2015 01:29:07 codehack
