DawnWander Crack is a cold and dark shooter about the survival of a nameless soldier in a rough winter. There is no room for weakness, fear, and doubt. You are a wild animal in the wild environment. Your basic instinct is to survive at any cost under any circumstance, to adapt to the harsh tests of the environment. Your enemies are bone-chilling cold, enemy manpower, and wilderness. Your constant companions are hunger, thirst, fatigue, and illness. Get animal meat, kill lost enemies to rob their corpses, look for supplies left in the ruins of a military performance. There are no standards of morality and ethics here. There are no friends here, and any person you meet will shoot a bullet in your forehead without hesitation. 1) Scavenge and Kill A typical day in the soldier's life involves the search for food and finding a place to stay in a military performance. The roads are passable and you can stop anywhere to obtain shelter or gather food. There are a large number of abandoned vehicles of all types, which you can scavenge to acquire new weapons and equipment. 2) A Night with the Wolves On the outskirts of the forest, there is an abandoned military performance with tents and other supplies that might be useful. Near the tent are the bodies of unknown soldiers killed in a military performance. There are already a couple of weapons and ammunition left behind. You will find a mysterious way to break into the tent and steal a machine gun and grenades. You will be chased by a single enemy soldier with a sniper rifle and a dog, then will find another weapon inside the tent and a backpack with items to survive in the cold wilderness. Try not to fall into his trap, and you will find other enemies in the vicinity and on your trail. You should avoid this path and find an alternative. In the forest are ice holes, snow drifts, trenches, mountains, craters, and holes in the ground that could hide an enemy. 3) Hunting by Moonlight The military performance is a large space with thousands of tents, but it is impossible to find all the weapon and ammunition inside, which is why you can only use your hunting skills. Also, there are plenty of sleeping enemies and they can reach you with a shot. If you find that the wind is blowing in your face, you will have to run from the direction that it blows. Running in a completely random direction makes the game more challenging. Look for corpses that have weapons or ammunition on them. Every corpse on the battlefield contains a weapon. You can turn the corpse into an enemy weapon. Look for food in the deserted military performance, and you can use this equipment to survive in the forest. For example, a kitchen bag can be turned into a gun, a small shovel, or other useful objects. Food and some bullets will help you. Try not to use too much ammunition as it will weaken your body. Ammunition are replaced by you with the corpses of enemies, and you need to avoid friendly fire. 4) Accurate shooting There is no one to shoot at you. Shoot the enemy that is attacking you first. Watch for a target that is 50 yards away, and you will need a sniper rifle. Snipers wrote:Hello, while submitting this I would also like to say that I'm not sure where I can offer more than a healthy crash course, but the occasional help is really appreciated. Strange being a US citizen, I find it difficult to really enjoy (mostly) anything foreign, or any culture that is vaguely different from mine (and I wish I understood more about myself to fix that, but good game!). That said, I have been going through uni in eastern Ukraine for something like a year and a half already, and some of it is starting to sink in and it's really beginning to grow on me. Last year I had a little fun making a time lapse video of the students walking down to the Maidan after the NY trade show and this year, we managed to smuggle in cameras and record some footage (warning: 50 torrents in the works). Just today I spent a bit of time watching the students all go "the fuck home" after the march and our response to it was to take over the VVTs building. I think our professor here has some good photos of the day (I believe he took them over the internet and posted them to his blog - once I find it, I'll link it to here). I'm curious as to what I can offer in return- I'll buy you drinks/take you to eat/take you out for a window tour if I meet you sometime (price may be negotiable). I'll also try to talk to more of you about what's going on here: people are taking my questions and I want them to answer and I really want to know how the system works and what we're supposed to be doing here. On a more general level, this looks interesting and I'm really excited to see where this goes. But I think for me, it's going to depend on where I can either find real life people to talk to or if I can find people willing to talk to me. I'll be here as much as I can and PM or post a note when I do... Cheers! Wow, thanks for the compliment, quite the honor. I guess we are all lucky to be able to be so involved in a huge story with so many people doing important work for themselves and the world. Here is my first effort at being the Q&A host: Venture: For starters, what do you see is the greatest thing about the revolution? The greatest thing
