The invention is particularly applicable to a card-type connector assembly having a receptacle and a header, mounted on opposite sides of a printed circuit board. In order to make the connector assembly as compact as possible, the spacing between opposite sides of the connector assembly is kept small, which makes it difficult to provide a suitable number of electrical connections between the connector assembly and an electronic device, such as a printed circuit board to which the connector assembly is connected. Accordingly, it is an object of the present invention to provide a compact, high density electrical connector assembly.The use of support may be relevant in the lives of some adults with ADHD: levels and correlates
