A Concise Guide to Solving the Procrastination Puzzle. PDF http://fineprintpdf.coQ: How do I connect to a MQTT client? So I have a java application running on my router which uses the mosquito-client to connect to the MQTT broker. However I'm having issues finding a way to connect using the java client from within my application. So far I can get my application to connect to the broker with this simple code: final BrokerService broker = new BrokerService(); broker.setBrokerName("broker"); broker.setVirtualHost("vhost", 1883); broker.start(); I then have a NetworkClient to connect to the broker via the topic/subscribed NetworkClient client = new NetworkClient(broker); client.connect("n0", "client"); As you can see I have a simple published message called client. However how do I take this NetworkClient and use it from my client application? Am I going about this the right way? A: You use a NetworkClient by connecting it like: NetworkClient client = new NetworkClient("broker"); client.connect("n0", "client", client.getInsecure()); Then you can take the client object and use it to send/receive. The only requirement is that you specify the port in the MQTT protocol. e-Series Lifesaver The e-Series Lifesaver is a handheld device that allows a user to instantly record and play back videos taken on their phone's camera.
