We need to create a form. This form needs to include some fields, an image, and a button. We need to save that image. I am working on a project where we are developing our own template that has a form field that includes a button. When you click on the button you get a modal dialog that has all the information we need. My question is, what is the best way to save that image to our website? We are thinking about sending the image to the server, saving it in a temporary directory, and then using the file path to download the image to a temp file. Then we would save that temp file to the server. Then we would read that temp file and replace it in our current web page. Is this the best way to go about this? Should I be using an API? Or is there something completely different 0cc13bf012
