A comparative molecular field analysis (CoMFA) was performed on 14-hydroxylipoic acid derivatives using a comparative molecular similarity indices analysis (CoMSIA). The CoMSIA model gave a cross-validated coefficient q(2) of 0.711 and conventional coefficient r(2) of 0.934, respectively. The 3D steric and electrostatic fields contour maps were obtained by assigning the field contributions to three regions, i.e. A, B, and C. The main results were that hydrophobic residues A and B, steric residues C1 and C2, and the charge inductive effect of the charged atom C3 were the main contributions to the activity. Furthermore, a quantitative structure-activity relationship (QSAR) model was obtained with a correlation coefficient of 0.923, which indicated that the obtained model can effectively reflect the relative activity of compounds.Welcome to the 2015 PinkChic Spring Fling!
